

University of Leicester:

The University of Leicester offers three different programmes to PUA students according to their field of study:

1. English for Engineers:

It is aimed at engineering students wishing to improve their English for use in an engineering context. This course combines English language classes with practical laboratory-based sessions in the Department of Engineering.

2. English for Medics:

It is aimed at medical students wishing to improve their English for use in a hospital or clinical setting. This course combines English language classes with the opportunity to find out more about the health system in the UK.

3. English for Media:

It is ideal for those who have an interest in media and communication and want to find out more in an academic environment, while improving their English skills. This course combines developing English language skills with learning about many aspects of media and communication.