

Faculty of Legal Studies and International Relations

---

How rightful it is for countries to force it's citizens to take the vaccine

Participants ( Students ):

- Balqees Yousef
- Entasar Hussain
- Habiba wailed
- Manar Mohamed
- Moamen Mohamed

Under supervision of:

- Dr. Ahmed Sameer

Project Summary:

Without a doubt, viruses have and still spread over the years so it not just the Corona virus that has spread lately, humanity has had a long history with diseases and epidemics, and it has suffered the effects of these diseases which was the reason for the deaths of not thousands but millions all over the world.

Corona virus or as some call it COVID-19, is still strongly imposing itself on the international field, as every county's concern is keeping an eye on all the updates regarding the virus and its impact on health, social and economical aspects. The whole world is working hard to apply the precautionary actions to limit the spread of the virus considering how fast it is evolving and how it's symptoms spread like wildfire between people.

As a result, to the updates and variations, countries are now taking strict precautionary measures and carrying out multiple experiments and researches of high accuracy to come up with an effective vaccine that will reduce the effects of the disease and keep people's lives. Moreover, with the new variation of the Corona virus we now have to increase the awareness of receiving all the vaccine's doses.

It's our legal duty to answer all the brought-up concerns in our community on how rightful it is for countries to force it's citizens to take the vaccine.

We started our research by conducting a survey and posting it on a large scale to confirm the reasons of objection to taking the vaccine, and from what we have concluded from the survey's results, we will discuss the answers to the concerns of the citizens in our research.

During our societal study, we discovered that taking the vaccine is a necessity the community cannot afford to ignore, and it's our legal role to support the country with its mission in urging people to take the vaccine for the greater good.

❖ Recommendation

Launching an intensive awareness campaign for the age group from 15 to 18, who had the opportunity to be vaccinated from the 7th November.